Why Structure Matters

Band 7 Introduction (aim for this):

"Across much of the world, birth rates have been declining as more couples opt to raise smaller families. While economic pressures and shifting social attitudes largely explain this shift, I would argue that the consequences for society are broadly negative."

Why it works: "birth rates have been declining" paraphrases "fewer children" with different grammar.

"economic pressures and shifting social attitudes" signals the essay's body paragraphs. The position is clear and specific.
